

Drive Away Family Violence

A program empowering Aboriginal women recovering from violence to improve their self-esteem and resilience. By giving you the confidence to drive, you'll have greater freedom and access to better opportunities.

For Aboriginal women living in the Western suburbs recovering from violence, Relationships Australia Victoria and Sarah's Drive School are providing driving instruction and support, helping you to get your driver's licence.

We support your driving ability, and in the process, work to improve your self-esteem and build your capacity to make positive life choices.

The program works with you across all stages of driving tests, with group activities to help you with Learners and Hazards tests, as well as practical driving lessons.

About Relationships Australia Victoria (RAV)

RAV works closely with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities to deliver services to support families and individuals.

About Sarah's Drive School

Sarah's Drive School is run by an Aboriginal woman who has seen and understood the impact of family violence.

More information

For more information, contact Sylvia Effrett, RAV's Community Liaison Officer, by calling 0447 490 002 or emailing seffrett@rav.org.au

This event is supported by our local Indigenous Family Violence Regional Action Group, with the funds provided by the Victorian Government Indigenous Family Violence Community Initiatives Fund.

Relationships Australia®
VICTORIA